

Memorandum for Mr. Pfeiffer from Mr. GregoryHall matterSeptember 24 1926

I went to Hoboken, New Jersey on September 16th and September 23rd. I called at 63 Willow Avenue, Hoboken and at the third floor, rear, I interviewed a sister of Mrs. Gibson, who is married, lives with her husband and has two daughters. I talked for some time to her and she is very angry with her sister, Mrs. Gibson. I asked her where I could see her mother and she said if I would come some other day I might be able to see her, that her mother was just out on business, was very nervous, excited and weak and she did not want anyone to talk to her. I then went back to 71 Willow Avenue, Hoboken, on the third floor front, apartment 11, where an old woman answered the door and said her name was Solme Cerrinner. She said that she is 76 years old and was married twice. Her first husband's name was Charles Eisleitner, who died when he was 51. Her second husband's name was William Cerrinner, who died when he was 82. Mrs. Cerrinner said that she had fifteen children and one of the fifteen was a woman who now goes under the name of Jane Gibson, better known as the "Pig Woman". Mrs. Gibson had borrowed money from her mother and her mother had to go to a lawyer named Sydam of New Brunswick, who is also Mrs. Gibson's lawyer and she, Mrs. Gibson, paid her mother back in $10. monthly payments. Her mother feels very bitter against Mrs. Gibson. She said that the Gibson woman was born December 6th, 1873 in New York City at 95 Eldridge Street and her name was Mary Eisleitner - she was born at six o'clock in the morning. She, her mother, had a mid-wife to take care of the confinement case. The mid-wife was a Jewish woman, past middle age at that time and Mrs. Cerrinner thinks
